Bees live in a house that is called a hive. There are three kinds of bees: workers, drones and Queens. Only one queen bee can live in each hive. If she is lost or dead, the other bees will stop their work.

Bees are very wise and busy little creatures. They all join together to build cells of wax for their honey. Each bee takes its proper place and does its own work. Some go out and gather honey from the flowers, others stay at home and work inside the hive.

The cells which they build are all of one Shape and Size, and no room is left between them. The cells are not round. They have six sides.

Did you ever look into a glass hive to see the bees while at work? It is pleasant to see how busy they always are.

But the drones do not work. Before winter comes, all the drones are driven from the hive so that they don't eat the honey which they did not gather.

It is not Safe for Children to handle bees. Bees have a painful sting that they use in their defense.

The Koala has a large head, big ears and small dark eyes that look at you without expression. Its nose as black as patent leather seems too big for the rest of its face. The Koala is a gentle animal. It is almost defenseless. Only its colour protects it from enemies. The Koala makes no nest. It just sits in the forked branches of a tree. It eats shoots of bamboo, eucalyptus leaves and fruits of trees. It likes gum trees the best because it loves to eat the leaves of this tree. If its supply of food is used up it does not seek food elsewhere but stays in its own area and starves to death. This shows that it is afraid to leave its place of residence.

A fuel is a material that is burned in order to get heat and light, and also to generate power. The process of burning, or combustion, is a chemical reaction. A material combines with oxygen from the air and gives off energy. The energy is released in the form of heat and light. Fuels can be classified as solid, liquid or gaseous. Or they can be classified according to their origin natural, chemical or metal based.

Wood was one of the first fuels used by man, and was his most important one for many centuries. It was the easiest to get, and the cheapest. But during the sixteenth century, wood started to become scarce in Europe, and coal began to replace it.

Coal itself is made of the remains of ancient trees and plants that grew in swampy jungles in warm, moist climates hundreds of millions of years ago. These trees and plants fell into the swamp waters. Bacteria changed some parts of the wood into gases that escaped, leaving behind a black mixture, mostly carbon. In time the pressure from mud and sand above squeezed out most of the liquid, leaving behind a pasty mass that slowly hardened into coal.
